Miss Morgan in Kansas

By Winifred Black

Miss Anne Morgan is out west watching the corn grow and finding out what the people who mow their own lawns in the summer and shake down their own furberies in the winter really look like when they are at home.

William Allen White of Emporia, Kan., is the home missionary who is taking Miss Morgan around to see the sights.

She rode up the main street of Emporia with him behind old Prince, the family horse, the other day, and that night she had fried chicken and hot biscuit and strawberry shortcake and floating island, and she called it supper and ate it at 6 o'clock in the evening, and nobody in Emporia, a Kan., is one whit the worse—or the better—for the experience of Miss Morgan.

As to Miss Morgan herself, she's probably having the time of her life. Some people do so enjoy being Bohemian and doing the slums. Miss Morgan is going a trifle further. She's actually interested in doing a little bit of real America and finding out how real Americans live when they are really at home.

She needn't have gone quite so far to make these discoveries.

There are a whole lot of people over at Methuene, N. J., or half a dozen little old places within twenty miles of New York who would have been just as glad to see her as the people of Emporia, Kan., and they probably wouldn't have hearted her so much about her as the people of Kansas.

New York isn't America at all any more than the mercurial on top of the pie is the pie. But New Yorkers seem to have to go a long way from home to find this out.

She'd be president of the Ladies' Aid society in some thrifty little church and secretary of the Y. W. C. A. and treasurer of the Kings Daughters, and she'd probably have the best layer of cake in town and have more luck with her setting hens than any other woman of her age in the country.

I wonder if she would be just as happy and just as useful, though she is, I understand, a very happy and very useful woman as she is now, when she has to go half across the continent to gaze in wonderment and perhaps a lightly concealed amusement at the same sort of people that her own mother very likely was.

I wonder if we who read this paper will live to see the day when the park authorities of New York will send west and catch a real American of the common or garden variety and exhibit him in a cage in the Bronx with his lawn mower, and his furnace rake, and his garden hoe, and his buggy whip, and all the paraphernalia of his wild and savage state around him, for the information of the wonderstruck New Yorkers.

WAGON BUILT TO FIGHT FOREST FIRES.

The state forester of Massachusetts recently inaugurated a vigorous campaign for the prevention of forest fires. In connection therewith he has had a wagon for fighting the fires built under his supervision, which is the first wagon ever constructed for this express purpose. Popular Mechanics for June contains a picture of this wagon.

The rear wheels are large and equipped with wide tires, while the front wheels are small, so as to allow turning in narrow places. The body is very much on the order of the ordinary chemical engine with slide rails and extinguishers. The equipment includes shovels, hoses, axes, rakes, lanterns and buckets.

ANTIDOTE FOR RATTLE-SNAKE BITE.

Strychnine is probably the only positive antidote for a bite of rattlesnake toxin—a bite or rather stroke such as a four-foot snake would inflict on a fleshy part of the body, as the calf or thigh. For such a bite, carrying, as it does, a hal teaspoon or more of venom deep into the flesh, all ordinary cures are unavailing. Hypodermically injected, however, sufficient quantities to surely kill the patient, were he not suffering from the snake poison, strychnine is a certain counteractant. The greatest danger is said to be in administering too little strychnine.—Guy Elliott Mitchell in June Popular Mechanics.

INSTRUCTION TRAINS FOR RURAL DISTRICTS.

A train of nine cars is now touring California in charge of professors from the State University at Berkeley, carrying valuable information throughout the rural districts. Five cars of this train are filled with exhibits of practical value to the farmer and the farmer's wife, and the corps of lecturers cheerfully explain every detail to the crowd, which turn out of every stopping place. The exhibits, which are described with illustrations in the June number of Popular Mechanics, include model chicken houses and hog pens, remedies and methods for treating diseases in live stock, insect pest, irrigation appliances for use in arid districts, and others equally interesting.

LITTLE WOMAN DID NOT FEAR INDIANS

Miss True, Who Took an Unexpected Nap, Proved Equal to Any Emergency.

Francis E. Leupp, former United States commissioner of Indian affairs, tells many interesting stories about "Women in the Indian Service." Concerning Miss Clara B. True, a teacher, he says:

"I have the testimony of a standard scale for the fact that Miss Clara B. True weighed 105 pounds when I chanced upon her for the first time in a low mud school house in New Mexico. The chief impression left on my mind was that of executive efficiency, and I marked Miss True for a future in the service. When I went away from the school, I collected some of his chief councilors and traded me several miles, till he found a place where our conversation could not be overheard, and there confided to me that his heart was heavy with fear lest I might be going to take Miss True away."

"The Potrero agency in Southern California having become discredibly notorious for its record of Indian and Mexican outlaws, I concluded that a man of about Miss True's build was needed to manage it. She had very distinct misgivings, at first, as to accepting my invitation to exchange a comparatively peaceful for a positively stormy post.

"For a while it was an open question whether the lawless Indians would not rebel at taking orders from a woman. Indeed, one of her earliest duties was to attend a meeting of Indians at which a debate was carried on in their own language, over her head, to decide whether or not they should drive her out of her agency. As the hours passed well into the night without any sign of a settlement, she calmly wrapped a blanket around her and took a sound nap in the midst of the hubbub. It was a bold thing to do, and it earned the vote in her favor. If she was as little afraid of them as that, the Indians reasoned, she was as good as a man, and they had no objection to her handling their affairs."

"But this stroke was only the beginning of her campaign. For a year or more she had to fight Mexican and Indian whiskey peddlers who tried to delude the weaker willed people into drinking done at a festa held near her school, she passed the middle of the night at a game, six shooter in hand, holding back a mob of half-drunken ruffians while a special agent of our service, who had been sent to her aid, pursued a particularly vicious ringleader into his hiding place and brought him to terms by putting a bullet through his pistol arm. On other occasions she went out with her Indian police on a hunt for Chief Special Officer Johnson, and hunted down transgressors in a wild, uninhabited region and brought them into court. The judges in the neighborhood were always astonished at her first appearance before them with a gang of handcuffed prisoners, as they assumed that this particularly zealous and successful fighter must be a big, strapping man instead of a dainty, very feminine woman."

FROM INGOT TO WATCH SPRING.

The American Steel and Wire Company has plants in Worcester, Mass.; New Haven, Conn.; Trenton, N. J.; Pittsburg, Donora, Allentown and Sharon, Pa.; Cleveland and Salem, O.; Anderson, Ind.; De Kalb, Ill.; and Waukegan, Ill.; San Francisco, Cal.; and Hamilton, Canada. Its equipment includes done and open handling machinery, blast furnaces open hearth furnaces, Bessemer converters, blooming mills, plate mills and rod mills; finishing departments for making nails, fence, market wire, etc., as well as specialty departments for springs, electric cables, rail bonds, wire rope and flat wire. It unloads a boat of ore from the Michigan mines at its docks in Cleveland, reduces this to pig iron in its blast furnaces, converts the iron into steel ingots in open hearth, and then into billets in a blooming mill, reduces the billets to a quarter-inch rod in the rod mills, and draws this rod down into the wire from which your watch spring is made, or your telephone connected up. For all of this great system it has worked out a plan for preventing accidents to employees.—The Survey.
